David J. Friedman assists businesses and attorneys with intellectual property, business transactions, litigation, privacy, data breach, corporate, employment, and general in-house company legal and business issues. David is a Certified Information Privacy Professional (“CIPP-US”) and serves as Head of the firm’s Privacy Group. Whether in private practice or as in-house counsel, he routinely drafts contracts, designs privacy programs, negotiates business transactions, builds and protects intellectual property portfolios, and resolves disputes either informally, through the court system, or other administrative agencies.

David is co-author of the popular and well-known legal treatise Intellectual Property and Unfair Competition in a Nutshell, published by West Academic. He is also a co-author of numerous other legal reference publications in the fields of intellectual property, digital rights, social media, publicity, privacy, cyberspace, and Internet law.

David was previously an Associate in the Washington, DC Office of Katten Muchin Rosenman, LLP. He also previously interned with the U.S. Trademark Trial and Appeal Board (“TTAB”), where he gained familiarity with the procedures of the U.S. Patent & Trademark Office and worked with judges, attorneys, managers, and staff.

David has extensive experience managing all aspects of intellectual property, including trademarks, trade dress, trade secrets, unfair competition, copyrights, licensing, global enforcement, portfolio management, clearance searches, brand selection, domain name dispute resolution (UDRP), transaction due diligence, SaaS and other technology transactions, Internet and e-commerce agreements, advertising and social media review, confidentiality and non-disclosure agreements, fine arts, and entertainment law. Other relevant work includes acquisitions and divestitures, employment agreements, corporate policy development, contests and sweepstakes regulations, and client counseling.

When a dispute occurs, David has nationwide experience helping businesses prosecute or defend litigation. His litigation experience includes state, federal district, federal appellate, and administrative courts, including the U.S. Patent & Trademark Office, Trademark Trial and Appeal Board, and International Trade Commission.
